

Dr. Nantida Sutummawong

Faculty of Science, Thaksin University, Thailand

Nantida Sutummawong is a lecturer in Faculty of Science, Thaksin University, Thailand. She graduated her PhD (2017) on Zoology from James Cook University with the research on "Assessing the vulnerability of Thailand's forest birds to global change". She is currently focusing works on Impacts, Mitigation, and Adaptation on Climate change to fauna in Thailand along latitudinal and elevational gradients. She also working on the how to manage and mitigate to Natural disaster, and the Scientist on the Earthwatch Institute Australia.